Title of talk: "Legal Aggression: In travel and domestic spheres."

Blurb: As recent changes in TSA procedures and the front page NYT series on courts abetting landlord aggressiveness against long standing residents, established institutions have increased their perpetration of aggressiveness of their "legal" tactics against people and humanistic values. How are these related to cause and effect of the current triumphal era, what are the implications for the health of the persons and the body politics, and what can be done about them by individuals and institutions aiming to uphold healthier and more just values? An opening dialogue.
